2/ Manuel Weeks' report on round 6

Then There Was One...

With ten players on 4/5 we expected someone to take the lead, maybe a Shirov or Sutovsky. In the end there was one player who took the sole lead in the Gibtelecom Masters, Armenian Gabriel Sargissian who defeated Indian grandmaster Krishnan Sasikiran in a wild game where for a sequence of moves Sasikiran kept offering a rook that was finally accepted to avoid perpetual check, the crowd of spectators definitely picked this as the game of the round for its content and exemplary fighting spirit. Today Sargissian has to solve the problem of how to blunt the brilliance of Alexei Shirov with the Black pieces to stay on board one.

All the other top board games were drawn but in completely different manners. Hikaru Nakamura and Lev Aronian went for a theoretical battle in the labyrinth of the Spanish Marshall variation. The players kept playing almost instantly until move 26. The American thought that his outside passed a-pawn would give him some advantage but the wily Armenian had worked out that he could set up a mating attack with only two pieces and force the American to come back and eventually agree to the sharing of the point.

It's not often you see a grandmaster blunder a piece, its even more rare that afterwards he can still manage to draw the game! This is what happened when Australian GM Ian Rogers sacrificed his knight against Swedish GM Pia Cramling. In a winning position the Australian had a number of good moves and after he played 29...Nd2 he thought that Pia might resign! After looking around for any possible moves she had it suddenly dawned on him that taking the en prise knight was legal and good! The ending was still hard to win and eventually all the pawns were traded off to only rook and bishop versus rook which Cramling still had one last attempt to win. The position is a theoretical draw but the defensive mechanism must be known. After 35 moves with only these pieces left he passed his knowledge test and made good his escape with the half point.

After an early loss the Greek grandmaster, Vasilios Kotronias, has been in the background this tournament but he is a previous winner of the event, having come equal first with Nigel Short in the first edition in 2003. Kotronias has a very sharp theoretical style and his games are always aggressive interesting affairs. By defeating Icelandic IM Bragi Thorfinnsson he has joined the pack of players half a point of the lead.

The Gibtelcom Masters is always a wonderful opportunity for young players to not only have a chance to play strong players but also to gain the necessary norms to become a titled player. There are a large contingent of International Masters who have their eyes on the coveted Grandmaster title. If we look at the results yesterday we can see that Kateryna Lahno, drawing with GM Peter Wells, Richard Pert drawing with GM Sergey Erechenko and Thomas Rendle drawing with GM Pavel Tregubov did their chances no harm.

Don't forget that there is a brilliancy prize for the best game, won by Nigel Short last year. Already in the running is Emil Sutovsky's beautiful sacrificial finish that had everybody believing he was utterly lost against Daniel Gormally before he uncorked combination. Well worth a look.

Nice to see some people performing above past expectations – Pia Cramling, Mohamed Al Sayed, Kateryna Lahno, Colin McNab, A.R Jasim, Hamad Al-Tamimi are having strong tournaments to date.
