2/ Manuel Weeks' report on round The Berlin Wall Stands Tall.

Armenian Gabriel Sargissian used the now infamous Berlin variation of the Spanish opening to draw with pre tournament Alexei Shirov. The variation became famous when Vladimir Kramnik used it to blunt the attacking prowess of Garry Kasparov in their world championship match. It even seemed to give Sargissian a slight advantage as although Shirov won a pawn temporarily it seemed that black's initiative would be more than enough. Further exchanges eventually led to a drawn bishops of opposite colours ending. Sargissian was joined in the lead by Israeli Emil Sutovsky who was worse for the whole game against fellow countryman Boris Avrukh till the latter blundered horribly allowing his king to be caught in a mating net with only rook and bishop and pawns. Sometimes you have to be lucky to win big tournaments and Emil who has agreed to sing at the closing ceremony must be hoping to do it in celebration.

Lev Aronian also joined the leading pack by defeating Greek grandmaster Vasilios Kotronias. The amicable Armenian is always ready with a smile or a funny comment and is a most original player. In the recent tournaments of Fischer random chess where the pieces get shuffled on the back rank he has proved virtually invincible. He has an original style that seems to confuse his opponents. Consider the position after 24.Nc3, there does not seem to be any obvious compensation for the pawn he is sacrificing on b4 yet after the pawn is accepted and the reply 26.Bg5 is played it suddenly becomes hard to find a move that will keep the balance. A game well worth playing over to show yet again the depth of chess.

English IM Danny Gormally is getting closer to the coveted GM title by defeating Australian GM Ian Rogers when the latter blundered horribly in a relatively equal position. This is the second day in a row that Rogers blundered a piece but at least yesterday he had pawns and a position to compensate! The arbiters will have calculators out today to work out what the likely suspects need in the last rounds to gain a norm.

The Albin Counter Gambit is an opening that you don't see often at high level chess. The only practitioner of late has been grandmaster Alexander Morozevich who is famous for his unusual opening choices. Yesterday he would have found a willing disciple in the form of U.S. Champion Hikaru Nakamura who essayed it against GM Alexey Dreev in order to take the Russian out of systems that he knows back to front. He did manage to get a more than playable game and hold the game for a draw. Maybe the Albin will continue to make a comeback?

Canadian grandmaster Kevin Spraggett also joined the pack half point off the lead by defeating Qatar IM Mohamed Al Sayed in a double edged double minor piece ending. Kevin was a former World Championship candidate in the late 80's and with his experience has always proved a tough customer to beat at the board.

The women have a new leader in the form of Viktorija Cmilyte who defeated Jovica Radovanovic. She is only half a point behind husband and top seed Alexei Shirov. At the Gibtelcom Masters the arbiters always try to avoid pairing family members together. If Viktorija wins another game at the top it may give her the bragging rights at the dinner table!

At the moment we have only one entry into the Best Game Prize in the form of Emil Sutovsky for his win over Danny Gormally. There is a cash prize of 500 pounds for the best game and although one would not begrudge the Israeli winning it as he is famous for playing many brilliant games it would be nice to at least give the judges some choice!! Please nominate your game to the bulletin room and Sean Hewitt, Bill O'Rourke or myself will be more than happy to note your name.
