2/ Manuel Weeks' report on round

Becoming a grandmaster in Style

Danny Gormally become a grandmaster yesterday and in the process caused the upset of the tournament by defeating number two seed Alexey Dreev. The game was a wild Slav defence with Gormally sacrificing a pawn in a well known theoretical line. With Dreev being pushed short of time and having to continually defend, his promising position collapsed under the pressure when he made a series of inaccurate moves. One of the goals of the tournament is for players to have chances at title norms and by achieving this norm yesterday Gormally added to his already acquired two to fulfil the necessary qualifications to achieve what is the dream of every player, to become a grandmaster! An added bonus is that he has come into the pack that is now leading the tournament. All in all a day he won't forget in a hurry! Congratulations also to Thomas Rendle on achieving an IM norm.

The 4 players leading drew amongst themselves, Emil Sutovsky avoided the dry waters of the Berlin Defence and launched his attack at Armenian Lev Aronian by avoiding the Berlin variation but he never seemed to get a tangible advantage from the position. Sargissian tried for a long time to make some headway through the defences of Zahar Efimenkov in an unusual Queens Indian but was also drawn in a level endgame.

Alexei Shirov joined the leaders again by defeating Peter Wells in a sharp Trompovsky. Peter Wells is one of the best writers of chess in modern times and he has written an excellent book on the Trompovsky. Perhaps he was hoping to gather an important game for the second edition. He did seem to be the first to play a novelty but soon afterwards Shirov sacrificed a pawn to open lines and get what looked like a winning attack. The Englishman defended accurately and by the time both players were short of time it seemed that the position was roughly equal. Then Wells thought he saw a trick in the position and played for it, unfortunately there was a large flaw and the top seed was ruthless in exploiting it.

Canadian Kevin Spraggett has been impressive in his last few games and yesterday he defeated Indian grandmaster Krishnan Sasikiran in a long manoeuvring game where he eventually won a pawn in a closed Spanish and nurse that extra pawn till the endgame where he converted it to the full point. The former candidate has joined the pack leading the Gibtelecom Masters.

Alexander Areschenko is the new leader of the womens prize! We say this because even though he is not eligible for the prize he has been a true ladykiller! He is on 4/4 against members of the fairer gender. Yesterday he defeated Victorja Cmilyte in a curious game where he gave up the exchange for activity of his remaining pieces. In time trouble she lost control and missed the deadly 48...a5 deflecting the queen from the defence. It's amazing how quickly a position may collapse.

Today we expect many of the players to go all out as it is the penultimate round and there is still a pack of 9 leading the field! Usually in the last round chessplayers like to take as small a risk as possible when leading. We expect such risk takers as Shirov, Sutovsky and Aronian to try and break free and take the lead.

Last evening arbiter David Sedgwick was joined by a group of bridge playing colleagues from London who are on the Rock to prepare for the San Miguel Bridge Break tournament at the Caleta hotel in May. David is confident that the Augustus Suite will be as exceptional a setting for bridge players as it has been for chess players. The San Miguel event carries a prize fund of 1000 pounds which is extremely attractive for a bridge event of its type. This will be another first for the Caleta hotel
